

Europe gets its own Identity

April saw the launch of a new domain name for the European Union. Up to 300,000 Europeans rushed to register their new ".eu" Internet domain names in the first hour of being able to sign up.

EU Commissioner Viviane Reding said the Commission hopes the ".eu" name will one day rival the ".com" name. "Europe and its citizens can project their own web identity, protected by EU rules" she said. Tec-Net (Europe) Ltd. A local I.T. Support company have taken this opportunity to launch their new website www.Tec-Net.eu. Managing Director Jason Scoltock said "as early adopters of technology we naturally wanted to ensure our European Identity was protected." Further information on how to register your ".eu" domain name can be obtained from the Tec-Net website.
